

I just learned that the Sinclair Broadcasting network is forcing its local outlets to pre-empt regularly scheduled programming to broadcast an anti-Kerry documentary. Pinch me! Are we in Russia? How can this be? Aren't they violating their public trust to broadcast only what is in the public interest? I could understand it if they also decided to force stations to broadcast Michael Moore's documentary - then the public interest would be served. But, Moore's documentary was a commercial endeavor that had to stand or fall on it's own merits in the marketplace.

Should you not prevent this abuse of the public trust?

Sincerely,
Dennis Ring
